

Cornerstones of the Natural Building Movement: Judy Knox & Matts Myhrman

Friday, September 1, at 7 p.m.

Judy Knox and Matts Myhrman are among the most honored and respected founders of the strawbale movement, tirelessly spearheading the worldwide grassroots revival from its beginning in the late '80s. They have given hundreds of workshops and presentations, inspiring countless people to saner, more sustainable, and kinder ways of thinking and doing. They are the co-founders and publishers emeritus of The Last Straw – the quarterly journal of strawbale construction and natural building, in publication since 1993.

Matts co-authored the classic book, Build It With Bales. A direct line can be traced from nearly every strawbale house built over last 18 years to their empowering work for the commons. But it's about more than that...

Judy and Matts will give an intimate, casual presentation at 7 p.m. on Friday, September 1st in room 2 East of the Marlboro Tech Center on the edge of downtown Brattleboro (next to the Brattleboro Museum & Art Center, which is across the street from the co-op). The door will be open shortly before 7, and will automatically lock shortly before 8. There's a big, free parking lot there. Marlboro Tech Center, 28 Vernon Street (Route 142) - <http://gradcenter.marlboro.edu/techcenter/>

A freewill donation will be taken to help cover Judy and Matts' travel expenses and to thank them for coming to see us.

Hosted by the
BRATTLEBORO AREA NATURAL-BUILDING GROUP
www.potkettleblack.com/bang <bang@potkettleblack.com> (802) 258-3861